The discussion in Japan about Futenma Marine Corps base relocation tends to focus narrowly on Okinawan's votes and emotions, Japan's domestic politics and exaggerated U.S. responses.

Missing viewpoints would be the reality of Northeast Asia, namely North Korea, South Korea, Taiwan and China.

How South Korea and Taiwan see the U.S. presence in Okinawa ?
How are military and political conditions of South Korea and Taiwan in relation to North Korea and China ? How these have evolved and how these go in the near future ?

On Wednesday, March 10th, Japan Commerce Association of Washington, DC invites the excellent speaker for those subjects, who is
Dr. Richard Bush, Director of Center for Northeast Asian Policy Studies at The Brookings Institution.

Dr. Bush's two-decade public service career spans congress, the intelligence community and the U.S. State Department.

Dr. Bush earned Ph.D. (1978), M.Phil (1975), M.A. (1973) at Columbia University; and B.A., Lawrence University (1969)

We hope you can join us in this timely event.
